PROSTITUTION BEYOND ADDICTION

Prostitution for drugs is not a choice!

Usually, addiction is something beyond our control, it's a disease. Pimps use drugs on many different levels.

They may seek women who are addicted or have a tendency toward drug abuse, promising them a supply in exchange for their work.

This relationship will continue only if the prostitute continues to work for him.

The cycle of addiction is thus exploited because she will continue to seek drugs and provide services to maintain access to substances.

Others lure women with drugs they don't have to pay for. A pimp may promise a better life, which can be tempting for someone who has endured much hardship.

The combination of addiction and control triggers a cycle that is hard to escape.
